Function Pointers

- Functions are not variables but we can define pointers to functions which will allow us to manipulate functions like variables.

- `int f();` a function which returns an integer
- `int* f();` a function which returns a pointer to integer
- `int (*f)();` a pointer to a function which returns integer
- `int (*f[])(());` an array of pointer to a function which returns integer